

*Special Section Commemorating
The Indian Citizenship Act of 1924*

Foreword

In my family, voting is a tradition. My mother took me to the voting booth every year as she filled out her ballot and emphasized the importance of having a say in who represents us. Now, I take my daughter with me when I vote in federal, state, local, and tribal elections, so she knows that this is one way that we, as Native people, can say we are still here, and our voices matter.

The centennial anniversary of the Indian Citizenship Act is a reminder for all of us that the systems in which we operate today were not built by or for Native people – but rather, to erase and eliminate us. For far too long, Native people had no say in the government that dictated nearly every aspect of our lives, and gaining citizenship required giving up tribal citizenship and assimilating into American culture. This is only one piece of the long, traumatic history of erasing Indigenous identity.

We have come a long way in building strong relationships with the sovereign Tribes that share geography with Minnesota and the United States, but we still have further to go. It has only been one hundred years since Congress extended US citizenship to Native people, recognizing the original people of these lands as citizens of the United States. And now I am proud to be an Ojibwe woman wherever I go – in the community, in the halls of the Minnesota State Capitol, and in the voting booth, and proud Native people now have a say in decisions made about us, without giving up our identity or tribal citizenship.

Peggy Flanagan is Minnesota's 50th Lieutenant Governor, an enrolled member of the White Earth Band of Ojibwe, and currently the highest-ranking Native woman elected to executive office in the country.

On June 2, 1924 President Calvin Coolidge signed the Indian Citizenship Act which declared all non-citizen Indians born within the territorial limits of the United States to be citizens. The Act authorized the Secretary of Interior to issue certificates of citizenship to Native Americans.

The Indian Citizenship Act was, in part, a response to recognize the thousands of Native Americans who served in the armed forces during the First World War.

However, despite the enactment of the law, citizenship was not a guarantee for Native Americans. The law included a provision that citizenship could be denied if it might, “impair or otherwise affect the right of any Indian to tribal or other property.”

Nearly two decades after the Indian Citizenship Act was passed, Congress saw a need to reaffirm and extend citizenship rights to Indigenous peoples through the Nationality Act of 1940.

Timeline of Native American Citizenship

- 1776 Declaration of Independence signed
  - 1788 U.S. Constitution enacted
  - 1831 Treaty of Dancing Rabbit Creek was ratified, allowing Mississippi Choctaw to become citizens
  - 1857 Supreme Court ruling in Dred Scott v. Sandford said Native people could become citizens through naturalization
  - 1868 the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution declared all persons “born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof” were citizens; the “jurisdiction” requirement was interpreted to exclude most Native Americans
  - 1870 Civil Rights Act of 1866 was ratified by Congress repeating the exclusion of Native Americans from citizenship based on birth location
  - 1884 Supreme Court ruling in Elk v. Wilkins reaffirmed the exclusion of Native people from U.S. citizenship
  - 1887 Dawes Act passed by Congress granting American citizenship to all Native Americans who accepted individual land grants under the provisions of statutes and treaties
  - 1924 Indian Citizenship Act was passed by Congress granting birthright citizenship with exceptions
  - 1940 Nationality Act was passed by Congress reaffirming Native people’s birthright citizenship

"...The bill as passed automatically make every Indian born within the territorial limits of the United States a full citizen.

"The bill is just what the Indians of the Red Lake reservation have been fighting for," said Edward L. Rogers, County Attorney of Cass county and member of the tribe, and president of the General Council of Minnesota Chippewas, It only gives them the right to vote, however, and does not affect government allotments or rights to tribal funds..."

Bureaucracy a la Mode.

(By Joseph W. Lattimer)
Our Bureau of Indian Affairs, established through executive order, is a bureau of the executive branch of government, and as such it is subject to the same principles of administration as are the other departments of the government. It is a bureau of the executive branch of government, and as such it is subject to the same principles of administration as are the other departments of the government.

In the case of Washington there is a group of those whom the Indian Bureau truly had fully engaged an intense, and they own property and money in the same way as any other citizen. This every dollar of this money is in the possession of one man, a man who is not a citizen of the United States, but who is a citizen of the United States.

In Minnesota, the Chippewas are not American citizens, according to the standard of our Bureau. An investigating Commission reported that the Five Tribes of Minnesota a few months ago were not American citizens, and that they were not American citizens, and that they were not American citizens.

Bill Makes All Indians Citizens

House Bill 1200, which provides that all Indians born within the territorial limits of the United States shall be considered as citizens of the United States, was passed by the House of Representatives on June 4, 1924.

President Coolidge is expected to sign into law the bill which repeals the Indian Citizenship Act of 1924. This bill would automatically make every Indian born within the territorial limits of the United States a citizen of the United States.

The bill passed the House on June 4, 1924, and is now in the hands of the President. It is expected that the President will sign the bill into law shortly.

“Approximately 125,000 Indians have thus been given citizenship. It is estimated that 200,000 Indians were previously made citizens by various acts of Congress.

While the Indians have all finally achieved citizenship in the land owned by their forefathers before the white man's foot had found their soil, the restrictions on the lands of the Indians has not been changed”.

Of The Day

Indians
When Christopher Columbus discovered one of the Bahama Islands he supposed that the new land was a part of India, and he called the Indians Indians. History tells how the Indian races were brought, in deportation, torture, slavery, cruel persecution, vengeance, force and force to way, cruel tortures, cruelties and hatred, towards friends. The white man has generally failed to understand the Indians, but the Indians were no doubt right who described "their mental temperament as poetic and imaginative to a high degree." During the past summer an important proceeding at law was held in North Dakota. A prominent attorney from Washington related upon his return from that one of the most impressive ceremonies he had witnessed in his lifetime occurred at the beginning of the hearing. He told how the white man's court was surrounded, with many leaders of the Indian tribe present as principals and witnesses in the litigation. Just as the court was about to proceed an Indian chief asked the judge to suspend proceedings for a few minutes. The request being granted the Indian reverently salute the tribunal and help of their brethren to aid them in securing justice for their cause. This brief ceremony concluded, the trial of their matter proceeded. In Washington, D. C., there is a large educational institution for the teaching of the deaf and dumb. It was visited at one time by a number of Indians, and in a very short space of time they were able to converse with the students and the faculty in the sign language. In the history of the school it is related that the Indians secured the aid of many conversations more readily than any other people who had ever come into contact with this school.

Indian Citizenship
As a result of the passage of the Indian Citizenship Act by the United States Congress very many have Indians in the country but by means of citizens of the United States. Approximately 125,000 Indians have thus been given citizenship. It is estimated that 200,000 Indians were previously made citizens by various acts of Congress. While the Indians have all finally achieved citizenship in the land owned by their forefathers before the white man's foot had found their soil, the restrictions on the lands of the Indians has not been changed, the Supreme Court of the United States having held that citizenship is not inconsistent with citizenship. The new law clearly stipulates that the Indians rights in tribal or other property should not be impaired or otherwise affected. Census statistics give the Indian population of the United States as 244,471 in 1929.

Indian Health and Habits
According to the statistics of the Indian Office, there are 13,341 Indians living in Minnesota, and it is estimated that there are 430 active cases of tuberculosis among them. This high rate of tuberculosis has existed ever since civilization began, in contrast with the life of the Indians—much better. The Indians in most parts of the country where they

The United States Supreme Court has reversed the Federal District Court of St. Louis when asked to grant an order to the St. Louis bank it was claimed that the strike property remained in the hands of the Federal Reserve Bank. He said that the property in the hands of the bank was not to be held when made. This court also declared that the court should not enforce an agreement that was unenforceable in a direct proceeding. "...Up to the time of the adoption of the citizenship measure by congress probably not over forty-five per cent of the Indians of the United States had gone through the regular naturalization process and been granted citizenship papers. Many, no doubt, in places where they were known, were granted the right of franchise without question as to their citizenship, because election boards have been a little slow in refusing to give ballots to the 'first Americans'...."

All Indians Will Vote At Coming Election.
The White man in the United States has the right to vote, and all Indians should be given the same right. This is a principle that should be maintained. The Indian who does not vote is neglecting his duty to himself and to his people. It is the duty of every Indian to go to the polls on election day and cast his ballot for the man of his choice. This is the only way to secure the rights and privileges of citizenship. The Indian who does not vote is denying himself the right to be heard and to be considered in the government.
