Redefining Success in Business

At Russell Herder, we believe businesses can be both successful and make a positive impact on the world. We measure our purpose by the well-being of our team, the good work we do to further our clients’ success, and the positive impact we therefore are able to make together. Being an internationally-certified B Corp provides the transparency and accountability necessary to grow along this journey in a meaningful – not simply idealistic – way.

In 2019, we further evolved both as a business and as a Benefit Corporation. There were many accomplishments that we celebrated as a team and with our clients.

Russell Herder continued to maintain high scores on our B Corp Impact Assessment. We are proud to report that, for the second consecutive year, we were named “Best for the World” by the international certification entity, B Lab, scoring in the top 10 percent for governance among all B Corporations around the world.

As a firm, we provided thousands of dollars in pro bono support to health and wellness, arts and economic sustainability initiatives that improve the world we live in. As well, our team individually contributed volunteer time to a long list of nonprofit organizations, mentoring high school students, volunteering at Ronald McDonald House Charities and supporting the arts, among other opportunities.

Internally, we began implementing ways to assess and improve our supplier relationships and our team member well-being.

Together, with other leaders around the world, we are working to redefine success in business. We cannot do it alone. Thank you to the clients and partners who have supported us along this journey.

Our transition to becoming and living as a B-Corp every day is only possible through your guidance, encouragement and collaboration. We look forward to the year ahead.

Our B Corp Journey

At RH, we have a long-standing commitment to both doing well and doing good.

It's been three years since we updated our legal status to become a General Benefit Corporation (also known as a GBC, an option like being an S Corp or C Corp). Our GBC status recognizes the value we place upon achieving social and sustainability goals in addition to maintaining a positive bottom line.

In 2017, we took it a step further and achieved status as an internationally certified B Corporation® (a Corp™). B Corps are monitored closely by B Lab, an independent and rigorous assessment group that measures the impact of all B Corps on team members, clients, community and the environment. One of the benefits of being a Certified B Corp is that it enables us to attract team members and clients who share our values and the belief that businesses can lead and influence change through action.

At the end of 2019, RH was one of 16 B Corps in Minnesota, among more than 3,000 worldwide, across 60 countries and 150 industries. B Corp businesses like Russell Herder are committed to reaching high standards of accountability and altruism.

Gaining B Corp certification through completion of the 100+ question scrutiny is just the starting point. From there, companies like ours must live the commitment every day in our performance, accountability and transparency. Taking this pathway isn’t something done lightly. It’s not always easy, but definitely worth the effort.
2019 Highlights

Over the past 12 months, we've made significant progress. Through a committed team and the shared philosophy of our clients, we are making an impact locally, regionally and nationally. Here's how.

Breakthrough Co-creation

Commitment to collaborating and forming deep working partnerships with the many diverse and unique communities we serve. Our proven approach is centered within an evidence-based process that relies upon deep field research and innovative, strategic creative. The result is meaningful, culturally resonant campaigns that make a difference. Ultimately, we measure success not only in award-winning work created on a collaborative basis, but also in long-term positive impact to the communities being served.
“Treat People Like People”

Through a partnership with the Minnesota Office of Ombudsman for Mental Health and Developmental Disabilities, we helped raise awareness of the staggering significant abuse and neglect of people living with disabilities. After extensive field research and interviews to identify the core issues, we partnered directly with vulnerable adults and their care givers to ensure their voices would be heard. Co-creation was the pathway to share the message that all human beings are deserving of inclusion and respect.
"Set You Free"

We continue to be deeply grateful for the opportunity to serve the Minnesota Department of Human Services on an opioids awareness and prevention campaign. As just one dimension of this work, our creative team collaborated with hip-hop artist Danami-Maurice Champion to create a music video exploring the power of love and connection in opioid recovery. We incorporated footage from interviews with Tiffany and Carlos, two Minnesotans who selflessly shared their family’s recovery story.

The many dimensions of this award-winning and life-changing campaign resulted in more than 327,600 website visits, 333,000+ video views and more than 203,000 online ad responses. And on social media the campaign now has over 7,000 followers and 22.8 million people have been reached.
At Russell Herder, the commitment to the ideals and responsibilities of being a certified B Corp runs throughout the organization. We are incredibly fortunate to have a team that excels professionally but is equally committed to those they serve. From creatives to digital strategists, brand planners to content developers, everyone is integral to our success and growth.

To that end, we took 2019 to enhance the work/life balance of our team members. Here are just a few of the accomplishments.

A cross-section of RH team members researched and devised an innovative and flexible time-off program that was implemented at the end of the year. Shifting from a time accrual model to an "unlimited" time off approach created a benefit that rewards team members with far greater flexibility in scheduling their paid time off. It’s also a tangible demonstration of trust and respect, the foundation of our mutual responsibility.

RH also converted to a new health insurance plan, designed to improve benefits and health outcomes.

In addition, we updated our ethics policy, incorporating our strong commitment to diversity, inclusion, and civic engagement. The job descriptions of our team members were also enhanced to include social and environmental performance as key performance metrics.

Our immediate environment is crucial to quality of life on the job. The historic design landmark we reside within, International Market Square, made numerous improvements and investments to reduce water use and conserve energy this past year. We have new energy efficient appliances, a bike room, and – coming soon – a new fitness facility.

Our engagement work group began measuring our internal and external efforts to increase diversity in our hiring and training, and ensure we support local vendors in 2020.

We are excited to have implemented these new ideas, procedures and policies that will help us deepen the impact we are making with our team, clients, community, and environment. Above all, it is most gratifying that these changes originated collaboratively. The hard work, research, and creative thinking from RH employees have absolutely helped us improve as a B Corp.
